The Operational Team

Our team is made up of individuals with diverse experience in the fields of participatory housing project management, business administration, urban planning, and environmental quality.

The housing crisis, the creation of new social ties, and the fight against isolation

- The production of housing through short supply chains,
- A collective approach based on social ties, daily actions that foster the development of social ties,
- Projects with generational diversity and participatory design

Housing adapted to everyone's needs, affordable and adaptable

- Participatory planning and design
- Functional diversity in the programs
- Affordable housing by bypassing intermediaries

Social diversity, sustainable urban planning, regional economic development, and effective management of transportation...

- Housing design tailored to residents' needs
- The promotion of eco-responsible behaviors
- Establishing short supply chains for construction and consumption
- Car sharing, buying cooperatives, neighborhood services

Hab-Fab aims to connect individuals looking for a project, groups seeking new neighbors, and people or organizations wishing to offer a space. In our Project Marketplace, groups can present their project and give their initiative new visibility.

How does our project exchange work?

Today, we are launching an initial two-part initiative.

- The first part is intended for groups or project leaders who wish to share information via our website. You must first fill out the questionnaire for groups and projects. After validation, the information will be published as a profile on our website. Interested individuals can then contact the project leaders directly to take things further.
- The second questionnaire can be filled out by someone looking for a specific project or in an area where no project has yet been identified. We record these requests and will get back to you if a project matching your request is launched.
