Publication: The Ocean We Share: Science in the Global South for a Sustainable World

Structure : IRD (French National Research Institute for Sustainable Development)

INTRODUCTION:

A reservoir of biodiversity, a climate regulator, a provider of countless resources... the ocean is one of our most essential shared assets. As the need for international action to preserve it grows ever more urgent, science must take center stage.

This book explores major advances in interdisciplinary research aimed at addressing oceanic challenges—ecological, economic, and social—which are particularly complex and pronounced in the tropics due to the unique characteristics of the ocean in this part of the world.

Highlighting the ocean's many facets, as well as solutions to protect it through dialogue among all stakeholders, are the objectives of this richly illustrated educational book. It should captivate an audience passionate about science and curious to understand the complexity of the world.
