Association for Environmental Education and Sustainable Development

Structure : War-dro an Natur

Brittany

War-dro an Natur is an organization dedicated to environmental education and sustainable development.

Nature within everyone’s reach:

If you want to explore a specific environment or a chosen location (forest, sea, moor, marsh, etc.), with WAR-DRO an NATUR, all you have to do is ask—we’ll work together to plan a day (developing the project, preparing the content, and scouting the site).

The WAR-DRO an NATUR team consists of certified nature guides and naturalists with extensive field experience, accustomed to working with children from preschool through high school.

The team bases its activities at Palacret and travels to locations near you. Its role is to facilitate understanding of:

- Of various natural environments and biodiversity
- Of the conservation and restoration of these environments
- Natural gardening
- The concept of a refuge garden A school garden: What a fabulous learning tool a garden is: the seasons, flowers and pollination, plants and soil life, the hidden lives of garden's tiny creatures… If you have a small plot of land and want to teach your students about gardening, WAR-DRO an NATUR offers to help you create a refuge garden. A garden for flowers and vegetables that encourages the arrival of beneficial insects through landscaping and the installation of birdhouses.
- Heritage (prehistory, Breton architecture, Breton culture and language)

In addition to field trips, nature workshops are offered, such as building birdhouses or other small crafts that aid in observing and understanding the environment

We work with you to plan your outings, so we're here to help you design your programs.
