Nature & Progrès is a citizen-led movement, free from any corporate influence, composed of members from civil society and professional members who meet the requirements for its label.

It is an association-based label displayed on environmentally friendly products, whose production is based on specifications, a charter, and a participatory certification system.

Nature & Progrès therefore calls for a c and is committed to:

- to research, experiment with, and promote a participatory and horizontal societal dynamic that fosters the emergence of consensus
- to an economy on a human scale that prioritizes artisanal processing, local production, self-sufficiency, exchange, and the sharing of practices and know-how
- for agriculture that respects natural balances and places farmers at the heart of the production system—an agricultural model capable of maintaining a vibrant rural fabric and ensuring the food sovereignty of local regions
- for human activities that respect our living environment, are resource- and energy-efficient, and follow a model that does not compromise the prospects of future generations.
