Preservation and Promotion of Drystone Masonry

Structure : Volubilis

Volubilis
Réseau euro-méditerranéen
pour la ville et les paysages

Volubilis is committed to preserving and promoting dry-stone masonry, a traditional technique recognized for its cultural and environmental benefits.

As the coordinator of the 2024–2026 Erasmus+ project, the association is leading a European cooperative project aimed at fostering the exchange of expertise and establishing a common methodology for professionals seeking to incorporate dry-stone masonry into their development projects.

Volubilis is coordinating an Erasmus+ project to preserve and pass on dry stone masonry techniques by developing a methodological guide and an online training course, while collaborating with partners to promote this heritage in rural areas.

This training is for you if you are…

- An individual who owns land with dry-stone walls or structures and wishes to restore them.
- A local government seeking to preserve and promote its dry-stone built heritage.
- A farmer or cooperative involved in landscape enhancement or tourism projects.
- An organization wishing to organize activities centered on dry stone.

LEADER – Map of Drystone Initiatives in Southern Europe This interactive map highlights drystone projects in Southern Europe, emphasizes their environmental impact, and provides resources for the general public and professionals.
